My website : www.sites.visualize-design.com/welcomer-francine My email adress : info@sites.visualize-design.com Hi, I'm a student from France working on her diploma in interior design in Milan, Italy. I've just realized that the university doesn't have a French teaching at the moment, so I'm looking for a way to continue my study in Italy. Could you please let me know if you're still interested in collaboration with me? Thanks a lot in advance, Francine ps: I think the budget should be ok, because I already pay my flatrent and my phone. A: Saying that you will pay "a bit more" won't work. If it's a fixed budget and you can't afford more, it's not a business. If you can't afford the flat, you need to sell it. If you can afford the flat, get a job, sell the flat, and fund the study on the side. There are many ways to do it, but one of them is to work from home. See for ideas. You should find a way to make enough money so that you don't need to work at all while you are doing the study. And yes, it should be a job. The other possibility is to work in a language school. Yes, it might not seem like the best idea, but many language schools use contractors to teach languages. It's a great source of money that you can use to fund yourself. I'd say there are some great opportunities for study in Italy, but that's definitely not one of them. You need to make it clear that you don't have any money of your own to do this. You might be able to talk your school into not charging you tuition for the semester, and maybe you can find some low-cost accommodation in one of the cities. However, for anything else, you need to have money to do it. You are not in a position to make any assumptions about the budget being "ok". You need to give us some indication of your financial situation so that we can give you a realistic budget for your needs. I'd strongly advise that you take a good look at all the opportunities you have locally. I think there are plenty of 82157476af
